Potential link between surface water and groundwater. The potential for coselection of surface and groundwater contaminants by mining activities is a familiar and well-documented reality in central western Australia. Despite high levels of mining activity in this area, the concentrations of metals in surface waters have remained below critical values. However, the use of reclaimed wastewater as secondary potable water by local communities has been estimated to have reached 5,000 m³/d of reclaimed water. This has raised concerns in the community that a potential exists for coselection of metals into drinking water supplies. In order to examine this potential, samples were collected from five different water sources in the Porongurup Gold Mine area (central-western Western Australia) (Desholm et al., 1997) and analysed to determine the occurrence and concentrations of metals. It was found that, of the 16 elements analysed for in the present study, only seven exceeded the drinking water guidelines of the Australian Drinking Water Guidelines Council (ADWC) guidelines. These include Pb and Mn which were found to be present in samples at levels above those considered to be acceptable. The results clearly indicate that the potential for contaminants to enter water supplies from mining activities is extremely limited at this site. // // Generated by class-dump 3.5 (64 bit) (Debug version compiled Oct 15 2018 10:31:50). // // class-dump is Copyright (C) 1997-1998, 2000-2001, 2004-2015 by Steve Nygard. // #import #import @class NSString, NSTextField, NSTimer, NSView, NSViewController, NSWindow, PKInactivityIndicator; @protocol IDEActivityIndicatorDelegate; @interface IDEActivityIndicatorView : NSView { PKInactivityIndicator *_inactivityIndicator; NSViewController *_delegate; NSTimer *_deletionTimer; BOOL _hidden; NSWindow *_window; NSView *_contentView; } + (void)initialize; - (id)delegate;

Q: Why does my Linux service crash on first run I have a cronjob that runs a Python script, which in turn executes another script to send out emails. This works just fine when the script is being run directly in the shell, but when I run the script from cron it just freezes for a second and then closes. The cronjob's start_time is 0. There are no errors in the logs. Any ideas? A: Not really a direct answer, but hopefully it will help. Check the Python LANG environment variable. Something like: LANG=us_EN python yourpythonscript.py Note that this works only for the current session. Q: How to iterate over dataframe columns, rows or column & rows and create a new column I have a data frame in python with different columns. I am trying to iterate over the columns and create new column from existing columns. It is similar to merge two columns that have similar data. dataframe = pd.DataFrame({'Store Name' : ['Store1','Store2','Store3'], 'Country'

:['Country1','Country2','Country3'],'Product' : ['Cat','Dog','Fish']}) Required output: This is what i am trying to achieve, but without success so far: def create_new_column(dataframe):
for i in????: x = dataframe[dataframe[i] == "Cat"] dataframe['Product_Cat'] = dataframe['Product'].map(x) A: Use dataframe['Product_Cat'] = dataframe['Product'].map(x)
Or dataframe['Product_Cat'] = dataframe['Product'].map(x).fillna(dataframe['Product'])
Sample: In [40]: df Out[40]: Country Store Product 0 Country1 Store1 Cat 1 Country1 Store2
Dog 2 Country1 Store3 Fish 3 Country2 Store1 Cat
