Gourds are prominent members of the family Cucurbitaceae that have been cultivated for millennia. During the past two decades, it has become clear that the mature fruit of some species that we considered to be wild gourds on the basis of shape and size contain a large number of biologically active compounds that are products of non-decaying plant tissues. These compounds are being isolated and their structures and functions elucidated. Chlorogenic acid is the major phenolic compound in the mature fruit, seeds, and stems of all gourds. Many of the known metabolites of gourds have important uses in medicine, food, and cosmetics.Q: Circular reference while using MSDTC I am currently using MSDTC between different SQL Server
