Mental health assessment in the Sydney Obstructive Sleep Apnea/Sleep Disordered Breathing Syndrome Clinic. Obstructive sleep apnea/sleep disordered breathing syndrome (OSA/SDB) is associated with impaired health-related quality of life (HRQoL), a persistent and pervasive negative impact on mood, sleepiness, cognitive impairment and daytime dysfunction. Little is known about the specific nature or frequency of these problems in OSA/SDB. We aimed to establish the prevalence of any psychiatric diagnoses, as well as the frequency of psychiatric comorbidities in OSA/SDB, along with associated mood and sleep quality. All OSA/SDB patients attending a respiratory sleep disorders clinic were invited to participate in this study. All completed the 30-item WHO Well-being Questionnaire (WHO-BREF), which provides a quick and easy measure of global mental health status. Overnight polysomnography was performed and polysomnography variables were used to determine the sleep-disordered breathing severity of the sample. OSA/SDB patients were also administered the Patient Health Questionnaire 9 (PHQ-9) to assess depression, and the Pittsburgh Sleep Quality Index (PSQI) to assess sleep quality. One hundred and seventy-seven patients completed the study (100 male, 77 female, mean age 47.5 years). Comorbid psychiatric diagnoses were reported in 69% of the sample. Mood disorders were reported by 54% of participants, with a general increase in the number of psychiatric diagnoses from mild to more severe sleep-disordered breathing. The reported prevalence of comorbidities in OSA/SDB was much higher than that reported in previous studies, emphasising the need to identify and treat these psychiatric problems effectively. The results of this study have informed the development of a pragmatic new OSA/SDB clinic intervention which includes more regular mental health assessment and treatment. This invention relates to a method of radiography, which uses a radiation image recording and reading-out method employing a stimutable phosphor and, more particularly, to a radiation image recording and reading-out method capable of efficiently carrying out image information recording, which is excellent in the image quality and free from image deterioration. Radiation image recording and reading-out methods, which use a stimutable phosphor, have heretofore been proposed, and some of them have been put into practical use. Specifically, a radiation image of an object is recorded as a latent image in a stimu-
