Yoshitaka Takemura, Brand Director

"I longed for an RPG that was lush with details." Yoshitaka Takemura, Brand Director "With God Wars Online, I have finally come to realize my dream."

Yamato Naruo, Product Manager

"Although other RPGs have techniques similar to this, God Wars Online takes advantage of the fact that we are revising the RPG genre." Yamato Naruo, Product Manager "Through its two-fold gameplay of Online Battles and Online Quests, it is possible for God Wars Online to connect your teammates and ask them to play with you, creating an experience that is wholly new."

Masanori Kasuya, Co-Producer

"I sincerely hope that all players will join in the most fun possible fight for the Royal City!" Masanori Kasuya, Co-Producer

Reviews Overall it has a feeling of being very outdated because it is built off of a bunch of dead game engines and plugins. The way they did quests was also fairly frustrating. The main problem I had with it were that it sorta relied on you to micromanage every NPC, who were friendly to you anyways and none of them would abuse or be rude to you. The quests would have basic things like you got the goorbell for whoever if you helped with a quest it would provide a little bonus or task you with something that would give you a little bonus. Like you would buy some potion at a shop and ask for a friend to come with you to give you a potion so you could give it to a healer. However because the quest was so minimal to you holding the bell would give you a bit of extra gold for the quest. If you wanted to buy the potion for more gold you could buy it for the normal amount and it would give you more gold. To just slightly clarify you could buy to much potion and give yourself more gold than you would normally be given. But to get say 50 gold more you would have to buy 4 potions because any
