With that in mind, let me tell you a story about what happened to me 16 years ago this September. I was headed to a potluck picnic at a Friend's house in Avalon, Maryland, when I discovered Metanoia had changed my life. We sat down together for a little picnic of bologna sandwiches and lemonade. But my friend's words struck me like a spark: Metanoia. He said this, we would change our world together. I met his eyes and I knew that something would be different in my life from that moment forward. The seed had been planted. The seed took root. I was convinced that I had to follow that spark. I was going to be a part of Metanoia. I was going to join the Church and be baptized. That afternoon, I called my parents and told them I had decided to be baptized. Two weeks later, I was baptized at a small church in Owings Mills, Maryland, on the banks of the Patapsco River. I was 16. I remember sitting on that folding chair, getting splashed with holy water, and thinking, "This is really happening." The day I was baptized, I didn't think I was worthy of God's love. I found that I really was. I was compelled to go deeper. The seed had taken root. I had Metanoia. Yes, I grew up in the Church. And like everyone else, I encountered its faults. Nonetheless, I had Metanoia and I had found God. That was the turning point for me. Something that had seemed impossible, just a kind of hope, became solid and true. I had Metanoia. My faith became real. When I was 25, I found a place to live that I liked with the hope of becoming a father. But that's when my dreams took another turn. I remember, I was in the park, reading a book and walking back to my car when I saw myself walking down a path into the park. I had Metanoia. I realized I couldn't have a family. I was going to be a single dad for the rest of my life. I would have my daughter, but I would live day to day, sacrificing everything to be a good parent. I couldn't do it. The realization was so great, I almost had a spiritual crisis. I loved my daughter, God's creation, so deeply, and I knew how much love I had in my heart. I couldn't say to my daughter, "Sorry, honey, I am going to be your dad, but I'm not coming home, I'm going to be a bum." I was going to be a father, and I was going to have a family, but that meant giving up everything. 5ec8ef588b
